38th Anniversary Sale

Uncle Hugo's is the oldest surviving science fiction bookstore in the United States. We opened for business on March 2, 1974. To encourage you to help us celebrate Uncle Hugo's 38th Anniversary, we're having a sale. Come into either Uncle Hugo's or Uncle Edgar's and get 10% off everything except gift certificates. A discount card will save you even more—you'll get both the 10% savings from the sale and the 10% savings from the discount card. (Sale prices apply to in-store sales, but not to mail orders.)

The 38th Anniversary sale lasts Friday, March 2 through Sunday, March 11. This gives you two weekends to take advantage of the sale.

How's Business by Don Blyly

We had a very good December, partly due to the lack of blizzard, ice storms, snow drifts, etc., that we had to endure the year before. But it was a very good December even compared to a normal year. January and February continued to be good compared to last year, but were nothing to brag about compared to an average year. Heating costs being down about 1/3 from last year helped.

Monday, January 9, I was in the store early when I heard somebody walking around on my roof around 8:30 a.m. I went out to see what was going on, and saw the dentist from next door on my roof. I asked him what he was doing on my roof, and he said "Photographing the evidence—come on up and take a look." Overnight somebody had gotten onto the roof and cut out the cooling coils from his two rooftop heating/air conditioning units and my two rooftop units. His units had been cut up in such a way that his heat also was not working, but both of my units were still putting out heat. When the repair guy showed up, he said that there's been a lot of this going on all over the metro area. When I called my insurance company, I was told that this has been going on all over the country. The police say that 10 properties in the immediate area have been hit with the same problem. The police have some not-very-good security camera photos of a suspect and have been trying to identify the guy, but no luck yet. The dentist's insurance company replaced his 17-year-old units with new units at no cost to him. My insurance company will be repairing my 2 units (one of which was only 4 months old when it was damaged) with $1000 coming out of my pocket, and they sent a letter that if I have another claim within a year they will probably refuse to insure me again.

On the morning of January 25 I received a call from the management of the apartment complex for the elderly where my mother had lived for the last 14 years, telling me that my mother had just been found to have died overnight. I was told that the police would have to come and look over the scene to see if there was anything suspicious, and when the police were done management would call the funeral home—so I should wait until the afternoon to come over. My mother had shown me where she kept her cash in the apartment and told me to come over immediately when she died before things started disappearing. When I got to the apartment about an hour and a half after the phone call, her cash, her keys, and her credit card were all missing, but mountains of other stuff had not disappeared. At work, I often feel like a horde of ducks are trying to nibble me to death, and now the horde of ducks has received massive reinforcements. I've been very busy dealing with the funeral home, family, the social security administration, her credit card company, bank accounts, etc., and especially with sorting through all her stuff and trying to clear her apartment. I can feel myself falling farther and farther behind on things that should be done at the store.

With the Church Knights and their witchfinder hot on his heels, Gair's only hope is the secret Order of Guardians of the Veil. But the Veil between worlds is weakening, and behind it, the Hidden Kingdom, ever-hungry for dominion

Last issue I mentioned one publisher that wanted to start charging an extra $8.00 for signed copies of some new hardcovers. They decided to instead charge an extra $1.00, which I think is justifiable because of the added expense of binding in the signature sheet and using a different ISBN and barcode on the dust jacket for the signed copies (instead of using the same ISBN and barcode on the dust jacket, and just sticking a "Signed Copy" sticker on the front, like everybody else does). Of course, using a different ISBN for the signed copies means that sales of the signed copies won't combine with sales of the unsigned copies for best seller charts, which has some authors unhappy even though they will make a few cents more per book in royalties from the signed copies.

For many years there was a Blockbuster Video about 3 blocks from my home, and often on a Saturday evening after I got home from work I'd walk over to Blockbuster and look for something to rent. A few years ago I noticed that I seldom found anything I was interested in watching. While some of the problem was Blockbuster's buying, most of the problem was that Hollywood was not producing much that I was interested in watching. Now, the publishers are complaining about how much sales have dropped for mass market paperbacks, but when I look at the new release section at The Uncles, I notice how many of the mass market books on the shelf I'm not interested in reading. I can remember when most of the mass market new releases at Uncle Hugo's would have an initial order of at least 15 copies, and would sell out. Now, half the spaces on the new release shelf is taken up with titles that I only ordered 3 to 5 copies, and many of those will only sell 1 copy. There are still some titles that I'll order 20 to 30 copies initially and I'll sell all of them, but there are a lot fewer such titles being published. What's especially painful is when a publisher has a series with a substantial following at Uncle Hugo's (such as Lyda Morehouse's series or Kristine Kathryn Rusch's Retrieval Artist series) and the publisher kills the series even though the author and the readers want the series to continue. It seems that the publishers are so obsessed with hitting a home run with a title that will sell like crazy at Target, Walmart, and Sam's Club that they don't care about supporting moderately popular mid-list authors.

There are now hundreds of thousands of self-published titles available. A few are very good, some are okay, and most are dreadful. In many cases the authors got suckered by unscrupulous publishers, who took the authors' money knowing that the book would never be able to sell more than a few cases to the authors, which the authors will have to store in their closets for the rest of their lives. Many of these books have never been edited, spell-checked, grammar-checked, etc., and are offered at high prices and low discounts that guarantee that a bookstore will never buy a copy. For an extreme example of this, check out <http://blogs.publishersweekly.com/blog/s/PWxyz/2012/01/31/the-worst-book-e-ver-is-moon-people/>

Once again we had lots more new titles than we had space for in the paper newsletter. Most paranormal romances, gaming related items, action adventure series titles, Doctor Who books, kids and young adult novels, reissues, and non-fiction books were either eliminated or had their descriptions shortened for the paper newsletter, but full information is on our website. There are also book reviews at our website. About 150 people switched from the paper newsletter to the electronic version in the last 3 months, saving us about $500 per year.

Short Recommendations by Don Blyly

Before I started reading A Madness of Angels by Kate Griffin ($7.99) I had heard several very favorable comments, which is fortunate because otherwise I would have given up on it after about 20 pages. It's about 50 pages into the book before the reader gets a clue as to what's going on, and finally on page 238 the reader is provided with the background needed to understand what has been happening up to that point. (Most readers don't find this as irritating as I found it.)

This is the first of a series of urban fantasies unlike any other urban fantasy series. Magic exists everywhere, but it is different in urban settings than in rural settings, and the urban magics featured in this series are extremely interesting. Among the magical elements are the blue electric angels, which evolved in the telephone lines and then extended to all electric media. They feed on all telephone conversations, all e-mails, and all of the internet. They thought they understood humans until they became part of a human sorcerer in modern London. The sorcerer, now partly human and partly electric angels, is the main character for the series, but there are lots of other very interesting urban magical characters in the series.

Although I was irritated about some of the writing early in the first book, by the time I finished the book I was completely hooked and immediately moved on to The Midnight Mayer (#2, $7.99) and The Neon Court (#3, $7.99) and I'm now impatiently waiting for The Minority Council (#4, $7.99, early March). Each book tells a complete story, but they should be read in order.

Leviathan Wakes by James S. A. Corey ($15.99) is the most satisfying space opera I've read in a few years. Humans have spread through the solar system, and are preparing the first generation ship to go to the stars. Mars is independent of Earth and has its own military fleet. The asteroid belt and outer planets are to some extent controlled by Mars, to some extent by Earth, and to some extent by huge corporations, but there is a revolutionary group that wants independence for the

Russell, Mary Doria	Doc (American frontier legend Doc Holliday and his girlfriend Kate take center stage in this novel that chronicles their lives one summer in Dodge City, KS, when Doc's life was ripe with possibility and hope, rather than the violence and illness that would besiege him later on) $15.00

outer planets (including the asteroid belt). The story is told from the point of view of two very different characters: Jim Holder, who was sent with a few other crew members in a shuttle on an ill-fated rescue mission by the captain of a freighter hauling ice from the rings of Saturn to the belt, and Detective Miller, a burned-out cop on Ceres who was assigned the task of searching for a missing girl and then was fired when he took the assignment too seriously. As war breaks out, Holder believes that he should broadcast everything he knows and let other people figure out what's really going on. Miller is great at figuring out clues nobody else notices, but likes to keep everything to himself until he has the entire puzzle figured out. And then there is the two- billion-year-old alien artifact that a huge corporation secretly found orbiting Saturn, which could dictate the fate of the human race. The first book comes to a satisfactory conclusion (no cliff-hangers), but at least two more books are promised in the series.

I finally got around to reading The Native Star by M. K. Hobson, which appeared on several best of the year lists for 2010 and was a Nebula Award nominee, and I enjoyed it very much. This alternate history fantasy is set in a world where the Union used Warlocks to help win the Civil War, and after the war continued to use Warlocks to advance the country's "manifest destiny". In 1876 Emily Edwards, a small town witch in California, acquires an enchanted artifact (or perhaps the artifact acquires her) and suddenly she has to flee for her life from evil government Warlocks, with the assistance of Dreadnought Stanton, a pompous and abrasive non-government Warlock from New York City. Much of the book is an entertaining flight across the country by horse, train, and biomechanical flying device. Most of the bad guys are dealt with by the end of the book, but there's still that pesky blood-thirsty Aztec goddess that wants to destroy the world, who gets dealt with in The Hidden Goddess ($7.99). Both books have more romance than I'd prefer, but they are both so entertaining that I'm happy to recommend them.

($26.99, due early April, signed copies expected) feels a bit different than his other books. It feels more like a historical novel set mainly in the Parisian art world of the late 1800's, with some fantasy elements and some funny bits (including some laugh-out-loud funny bits) mixed into the historical novel.

There are many colors of paint available to artists, most available from multiple sources, but there is a very special color of blue paint, sacre bleu, which is superior to all other shades of blue, and it is only available from one source. And the price (not in the monetary sense) of using sacre bleu is very high to any artist who uses it. Baker-turned-painter Lucien Lessard and bon vivant Henri Toulouse-Lautrec try to solve the mystery of sacre bleu, and it is a very strange mystery.

A Rising Thunder by David Weber ($26.00, due early March) is the latest in the Honor Harrington series, #17 in the universe. Although this is one that supposedly features Honor as the main character, she doesn't show up until about 1/4 of the way through the book, and much of the book follows other characters. The Solarian League and Manticore are at war, battles are fought, secrets are revealed, new alliances are forged. The only disappointment is when you reach the end of the book and realize you have to wait for the next installment to find out what happens next.

In Red Delicious Death by Sheila Connolly ($7.99), Meg Corey, new owner of an apple orchard, is getting ready to have her first apple crop picked. It constitutes more work than she realizes. She needs to find pickers to pick the apples, places to sell the apples, and has to figure out when to pick the apples. Lucky for her, she has help. When her friend, Lauren, calls and asks her to help some young chefs who want to open a restaurant, she agrees, not realizing what that would mean. She calls her real estate friend and they find the young chefs a place they could turn into a restaurant. She brings in Seth, a local plumber, to help them. She assumes that will be enough. When one of the chefs is murdered, she finds herself drawn into the case. The young man didn't know anyone in town. He was friendly and outgoing. Who would want to kill him? She finds out that only a local could have committed the crime, something she would rather not think about. The remaining chefs find they are running out of money. Meg finds a way to help them find a way to open the restaurant. While she drums up support for her idea, she figures out who the murderer is, too late to avoid another tragedy.

I just finished reading two murder mysteries about women who are having wedding planning problems. Although both take place in England, one takes place in the late 1800s, the other in the present. Both mysteries kept me up late at night to finish them.

The first one is A Fatal Waltz by Tasha Alexander ($13.99). Lady Emily Ashton wants nothing more than to marry Colin Hargreaves. Unfortunately, her mother and the Queen of England as well as his job as a spy keep pushing back the date. When a man who threatens her future with Colin is murdered, she doesn't shed any tears. When her best friend's husband is arrested for the crime, she is determined to prove his innocence. The trail brings her to Venice where Colin is on a mission with a beautiful woman who warns Emily that she wants Colin and will do what's necessary to keep her

Townley, Roderick The Door in the Forest (Kids; In the heart of a forest lies an island, impenetrable to all but the snakes patrolling its waters. But Daniel is determined to get there, along with his friend Emily, whose mother was taken away by government troops, and whose grandmother reads the future in her bubble bath. Enter the soldiers. Are they searching for something? A treasure map? The island? The girl?)..... $6.99

Vaughn, Carrie Steel (YA; A rusty sword tip transports Jill to the deck of a pirate ship. Will a dark enchantment, salty kisses, and a duel with an evil pirate captain leave her stranded forever in the 18th century?)..... $8.99

Walsh, Jill Paton The Green Book (alternate title: Shine) (Reissue; Kids; Pattie and her family are among the last refugees to flee a dying Earth. But when the group finally lands on the distant planet which is to be their new home, they discover that the colony is in jeopardy. Nothing on this planet is edible, and they may not be able to grow food. With supplies dwindling, Pattie and her sister decide to take the one chance that might make life possible on Shine)..... $6.99

Yarbro, Chelsea Quinn Commedia della Morte (Saint-Germain #25: Madelaine de Montalia - now a vampire - has been arrested by France's Revolutionary Tribunal. To rescue her, Saint-Germain sneaks into France with a troupe of actors. But he soon finds himself betrayed, his own life as well as Madelaine's in danger). $29.99

Arthur, A.C. Temptation Rising (Shadow Shifters #1: PBO; Roman is a seductively charming attorney, and a criminal suspect with suspicious connections to the Amazon jungle. And cop Kalina has just discovered his link to a secret race of shapeshifting jaguars, sworn to defend humanity from the most savage of their kind). $7.99

Ballantyne, Tony Twisted Metal (Robot Wars #1: In a world of intelligent robots who have forgotten their own distant past, all metal is a valuable resource to be fought over. War looms as the soldiers of Artemis sweep across Shull. Only the robots of Turing City stand in their way, robots who believe they are something more than metal)..... $9.99

Banks, Dakota Deliverance (Mortal Path #3: A beautiful Renaissance murderess is recruiting Maliha as her new assassin. Maliha is turning into a lethal puppet, forced to kill innocents or see her missing friends die horribly)..... $7.99

Banks, Iain Walking on Glass (Reissue; Graham Park is in love, but Sara Fitch is an enigma to him. Steven Grout knows that They are out to get him, and They are. Quiss, insecure in his ramshackle castle, is forced to play interminable impossible games. The solution to the oldest of all paradoxical riddles will release him, but he must find an answer before he knows the question. Park, Grout, Quiss - no trio could be further apart, but their separate courses are set for collision)..... $13.95

Barant, D.D. Back from the Undead (Bloodhound Files #5: PBO; Jace has a new case, but how is she, a mere human, supposed to penetrate a child-trafficking ring of pire orphans - one that turns out to be part of a blood-farm operation?) $7.99

Bassingthwaite, Don The Eye of the Chained God (Dungeons & Dragons: Abyssal Plague: PBO; With Vestapalk growing ever stronger and plague demons on the rise, Roghar and Albanon know they will have to act soon. They gain an unexpected ally when Kri resurfaces, with wisdom garnered from the Chained God. It seems even Tharizdun himself opposes Vestapalk) $7.99

Bear, Elizabeth Ad Eternum (New Amsterdam: Novella. 1962: The wampyr has returned to New Amsterdam for the first time since he fled it on pain of death years before. On the eve of social revolution, he's surrounded by inescapable reminders of who he used to be. For a thousand years he's chosen to change rather than to die. Now, at last, he faces a different future). $25.00

Bear, Elizabeth Range of Ghosts (Temur is heir to the throne of the Great Khan, in exile to escape his

from marrying him. It's hard for her to remember why she's in Venice when both her life and Colin's are in danger from people who want to stop Colin from doing his job and try to use her to do it. In spite of everything, she finds the killer and learn more than she wants to know about Colin.

The second one is Necessary as Blood by Deborah Crombie ($13.99). Scotland Yard detective Gemma Jones wants to be married to detective superintendent Duncan Kincaid. She just doesn't want a wedding, not the wedding her mother who is suffering from leukemia, wants her to have. So when her best friend's estranged husband calls her about a missing person, she becomes involved even though the case is given to Duncan. The missing man is a Pakistani lawyer. His wife disappeared three months earlier. They leave behind a beautiful child named Charlotte who is less than three years old. Gemma bonds with Charlotte and wants to make sure the right person gets custody. The child's father has no living relatives. The child's maternal grandmother and uncles are undesirable as guardians. While Gemma tries to get help from the suspects in the case to keep Charlotte from going with her grandmother, Duncan investigates the murder. Their investigations come together on the happiest day of their lives and they find the truth which leads to finding the murderer.

Do you believe that there are those who commune with the dead? Sarah Brandt doesn't in Murder on Waverly Place by Victoria Thompson ($7.99). She reluctantly goes to a séance with her mother because her mother asks her to. Both Sarah and her mother feel guilt over the death of Sarah's older sister. Sarah's mother needs to feel that her older daughter will forgive her for not helping her when she was alive. Nothing at the séance makes a believer out of her. Her mother does believe. In spite of promising Sarah she won't go back, she does and someone at the séance is murdered. Sarah's mother draws Sarah into the investigation when the medium is accused of committing the crime. There are plenty of suspects. The woman who was killed had been the one who employed the medium. She took what she found out about the others and blackmailed them.
